

Let the River Flow

The “Keep Your Land, Keep Your Seed” campaign flows like a river—a force of nature, ancient and unstoppable. Just as a river runs through valleys and plains, nourishing all in its path, this campaign sweeps across communities, uniting hands, hearts, and voices in its mighty current to preserve our seeds and protect our land.

This river, our campaign, carries with it all it encounters, much like waters that gather stones, silt, debris, and life itself—good and bad alike. It picks up knowledge from the past and innovations of the present, carrying forth the wisdom of ancestral seeds and new ideas for sustainable farming. When the dry season of hardship slows its course, the campaign does not waver; it may narrow, but it never ceases. And in times of opportunity and need, it swells and floods, reaching farther than ever, igniting conversations and awakening communities to action.

With each bend, each meeting of tributaries, this campaign grows stronger, engaging all—from elders on far hillsides to young farmers in bustling towns. Every stakeholder, every community, becomes a drop within its flow, joining to safeguard the seeds and rights, reinforcing a bond as deep and resilient as the river’s roots to the land.

Research and partnerships form the riverbed that guides it. Just as rivers carve their own paths, leaving marks that endure for generations, this campaign etches a legacy of shared knowledge and mutual strength. In this flow, indigenous practices and modern methods meet and blend, ensuring the land is tended with care and that seeds flourish both in market stalls and in the soul of the community.

Flowing freely and with purpose, the campaign is like water itself—transparent and steadfast. Together we surge forward, protecting the essence of land and seed, standing like rivers joined from afar. We are the river of resilience, unbreakable and bound by pride, flowing always towards a future where our lands and seeds are honored, kept, and forever secure.

Written by Calistas Mubangizi and Brians Agaba, COPACSO

Disclaimer: COPACSO is a member of the Keep Your Land, Keep Your Seed Campaign in Uganda

To join the campaign, contact us at info@land-in-uganda.org